What does it mean to flourish in a rapidly changing world?

The National Positive Psychology Association (NPPA) invites researchers, practitioners, educators, and scholars to explore this question at its upcoming conference, titled “The Future of Human Flourishing: Culture, Technology, and Society.”

Human flourishing is shaped not only by individual experiences, but also by the cultural worlds we inhabit, the technologies we engage with, and the societies and communities in which we live. As these contexts continue to evolve, Positive Psychology is presented with new questions and new possibilities for understanding and fostering well-being.

This conference brings together diverse perspectives on the future of human flourishing. Culture invites us to explore diverse understandings of the good life, Indigenous Knowledge Systems, spirituality, meaning, values, traditions, and culturally grounded pathways to well-being. Technology examines how artificial intelligence, social media, digital environments, and emerging technologies are transforming human experience, relationships, and well-being. Society expands our focus toward communities, institutions, education, work, public health, sustainability, social change, and the conditions that enable collective flourishing.

Through keynote addresses, paper presentations, symposia, and engaging scholarly discussions, the conference will provide a platform for examining emerging ideas, sharing innovative research, and bringing diverse perspectives into conversation.

We invite contributions that challenge conventional understandings, bridge disciplines and knowledge systems, and envision new pathways toward human and collective flourishing.

Together, let us explore how culture, technology, and society can shape the future of human flourishing.

With regards,
Organizing Committee, NPPA
